Porter Keadle Moore, LLP Wins Psychologically Healthy Workplace Award

Firm Recognized for Promoting Health and Well-Being of Employees

October 24, 2006 – Atlanta, GA – Porter Keadle Moore, LLP (PKM) today was presented with a Psychologically Healthy Workplace Award from the Georgia Psychological Association (GPA). The award was presented by Ed Baker, Atlanta Business Chronicle Publisher, and the GPA's Dr. Joni Prince, to recognize PKM for its understanding of the link between employee health and well-being and organizational performance. The firm, along with one other Georgia company, received the award for implementing a variety of workplace practices in an active effort to create a positive work environment.

“In this time of high job stress and increasing demands on employees, these exemplary workplaces have made it a priority to create environments that are sensitive to the health and well-being of their workers,” says Dr. Betsy Gard, GPA President. “By rewarding these organizations for their efforts, we hope others will take notice and implement similar programs in their workplaces.”

“It is such an honor to be recognized for something that we feel is such a core part of our culture,” said Phil Moore, PKM Managing Partner. “Looking out for the physical and mental health of employees is something that we’ve always done. It just makes sense from a business perspective and morally.”
